

In this song Annamaiah says that the flowers and songs with which he worshipped Lord Venkatesa are his treasure. He adds that his Lord always remains on his tongue to sing his praise.

Oh Lord, preserve the flowers that I placed on your feet while worshipping. After all the flowers are your creation only.

1. One devotional song is enough to protect us.

Let the remaining songs be in your custody. Your name bestows all satisfaction. It is not costly but its fruits are many. You are my only prop. These songs are my limitless treasure.

2. You remained on my tongue and inspired me to sing your praise. You are Lord Vishnu with thousand names. What am I after all to sing your praise? Oh Lord, you bestowed me punyam (piety) abundantly.

3. My writing is not out of pride. I only extolled your glory. I didn't do all this on my own. My disciplined life enabled me to sing. Please don't find fault with me. Oh Madhava, I am your servant

. You are Sree Venkateswara.
